Humans are hard-wired to feel more comfortable in places where we can see what's coming: prospect, and leave if needed: refuge.

Long expanses of blank walls make us nervous.

We'd rather walk along streets that have windows and doors.

Learn more about this and other urban design principles at www.designingbetterplaces.com